Sharing is good manners

We still love small plates, and we love sharing plates. At ROSE'S LUXURY in D.C., you can do both in style. The menu urges you to "choose a couple of small/family style dishes to share," but you'll have trouble with the choosing part. The smoked brisket with white bread and slaw? The pork sausage with habanero and lychee? The choices are no less agonizing at PEARL & ASH in Manhattan, where you'll fret about the fried quail and hand-wring over the hanger-steak tartare. At TORO, with outposts in both Boston and New York, just give in: Order (and share) as much of Jamie Bissonnette's Spanish-influenced menu as you possibly can (and don't miss out on the razor clams with piquillo peppers).
